BATHROOM FEATURE / 1 FEBRUARY, 2015

ANGULAR PERSPECTIVE

Tilt towards the sharper side of life and explore the trend for all things angular... We all know our isosceles from our equilateral but here we're also delving into the slanting, pitching world of the asymmetric, discovering how it attracts the eye imparting an exciting feeling of ordered disorder.

This bathroom includes products made of white Corian, a non-porous, durable, solidsurface material that can be sculpted into complex shapes such as this bath with obtuse slanted end and the Warp basin with recessed bowl. The material, which is smooth to the touch, has also been used to clad the lower walls and frame the Warp mirror. Bath £8,250; basin £1,300; Warp wall cladding tile panels from £115 each.
